

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

- Between 1982 and 1999, the percentage of alcohol-related highway fatalities steadily declined from 57% to 38%.
- In 2000, alcohol-related deaths started to increase, especially among moderately impaired males aged 18-34.

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

Q: What is the difference between drunk and "buzzed"?

Buzzed = Drunk Survive the Holiday Drive

A: Nothing but a misinformed mindset.

- Studies show that buzzed drivers think “drunk drivers” are bad people.
- They don’t realize that even if they aren’t wasted, they’re still over the legal limit and their driving is impaired.

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

Q: What blood alcohol content level is considered legally impaired?

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

A: In all 50 states, .08 is legally drunk.

- How many drinks does it take to reach the limit?
- Probably less than you think.
- Depends on gender, weight, and fluctuating factors such as how much you've had to eat.

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

- 1 12-ounce beer =
- 1 6-ounce glass of wine =
- 1 6-ounce glass of champagne =
- 1 1.5-ounce glass of distilled spirits

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

- More than one drink per hour means you're probably drunk, even if you only feel a little buzzed.
- You don't have to be falling-down-drunk to be a danger behind the wheel

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

- Here are some of the effects of alcohol that begin with your first sip ...

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

- Remember, there's no difference between buzzed and drunk.
- This isn't the worst thing that might happen if you get buzzed ...

Buzzed = Drunk

Survive the Holiday Drive

buzzed driving is drunk driving